The Edna is in what is known as the "Giltipin County Gold Belt," which is only four miles wide and fifteen miles long and has a record of having already contributed $200,000 to the gold supply of the world.

This property is made up of a group of six mining claims, 150 feet by 150 feet each, and is situated on the same body of land immediately adjoining the great Alice mine, which is now producing from one hundred to two hundred tons of ore per day, worth by assay $10 per ton.

The claims which make up the Edna property are:

THE ALMA Nos. 1 and 2. THE ALICE Nos. 1 and 2. THE GETA and the IRA K.

They are situated forty-eight miles from Denver, ten miles from Central City, and near the head of Fall River, which is the outlet of Silver Lake.

A limited amount of shares are to be sold at 10c. per share, the proceeds to be turned into the treasury and used for putting in the necessary machinery and to furnish working capital for the company. Any number of shares will be sold at the above-named price.

In addition to the above-named claims, our company has purchased a very large claim called the "16 to 1." The ore from this mine runs very rich in gold and silver, averaging $50 per ton.

Not one cent goes for promotion. There are no insiders. We all commence on the same footing, and will share the profits according to our holdings.

Certificates of stock will be issued for money received by mail to subscribers, otherwise, at above rate, 10c. per share.

In the morning we appeared before the magistrate and I was reminded of the common watch,

and that kind of thing, and as far as I remember, the police threw in the charge of drunken and disorderly conduct, and there were two of them. After some explanation the magistrate dismissed the charges against us

with a caution, on the ground of ex-cessable mistake. And, indeed, it was most excusable. Apparently the Italian had really lost his money, and whether it was his money or Jacko's

that he had been pursuing when I encountered it I do not know to this day.

At all events, the police had captured

the other monkey during the night and shot the two of them together. There they sat, two ugly, grinning, indistinguishable creatures, both guilty, according to the evidence, of aggravated assaults on the police.

"When we were released from the lockup the magistrate asked us to return to the police station. The Italian looked at each other blankly. He knew no more than I which was his property.

Of course, it was useless to consult the police about the matter. The magistrate pointed out, there is no presumption either in law or in fact as to the ownership of two stray monkeys.

I appealed to him to decide the question, and he pointed out that it was the duty of the police to restore property to its owners. He said that he was solomon, but only a police magistrate, and that he doubted whether even the house of lords could throw much light on the subject. The matter, he thought, was eminently one to be settled out of court.

"At first I tried to solve the difficulty

by buying out the Italian claimant, but either of the monkeys, with the idea of sorting them afterward. But, he also,

it appeared, had a romantic attachment

for his carousing monkey, and he declined my overtures with fervent ap-

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton-Browne, M.D., L.L.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines; flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphates of lime and soda. It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anæmia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It is like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute. SCOTT & BOWNE, New York City, N. Y. SCOTT'S Emulsion is sold by all druggists, but be sure you get the real one.

HYDE PARK, THE BEAUTIFUL

New Estate of Frederick Vanderbilt

at a Veritable Paradise.

How Dilapidated Buildings and Neglected Grounds Have Been Renowned—An Old Carriage House Becomes an Ideal Villa for a Lodge.

[Copyright, 1906.]

About a year and a half ago Frederick W. Vanderbilt purchased from the heirs of the late Walter Langdon the estate known as Hyde Park, about eight miles from the Hudson, about eight miles from the Hudson, about eight miles from the Hudson.

After the death of Mrs. Langdon, who was a member of the Astor family, the place was mostly neglected; and on the death of Mr. Langdon the heirs were glad to sell it to Mr. Vanderbilt for novel arrangement in curtains draped the doors. It has always been a problem how to retain in a room the doors, which one often wants to close, and still have the graceful effect of portieres.

This is arranged in the Vanderbilt cottage by a jointed curtain pole, which, being fastened to the door itself opens and shuts with it. Drapery on another pole above the door conceals the upper molding, and gives a dainty finish to the whole.

On the other side of the door is hung another curtain, so that when the door is open you still have the draped doorway. As the curtains are of the softest and richest kind, the effect is very charming.

A gallery surrounds the large central hall, and from it opens the rooms in the second story. Above this one ascends by a narrow stairway to the roof, and here you step out through a veritable hatchway on what seems to be a veritable deck, with graceful, canvas floor, and all complete. It is easy to imagine a merry party of men gathered up here among the tops of the trees on a summer night for a comfortable smoke before turning in.

Besides the lodge, already completed, there are in process of construction two other houses, to be occupied by friends or relatives of the Vanderbilts. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have no children, and they seem to have a fondness for making homes for people. One of these houses is to be for Mr. and Mrs. Howard, of New York. Mrs. Howard is a niece of Mrs. Vanderbilt, and was a Post. Her house will stand on an elevated ridge on the east side of the highway, commanding a delightful view of the surrounding country and the Hudson.

It is a Greek temple, with a pediment of stone. The material used in its construction was in great part taken from the old stone walls, care being taken to select rocks which had moss and lichens on them and to leave these growths undisturbed. The house is approached by a natural driveway, winding along by one of those ledges of rock which add so much to the beauty of the estate.

The Greek mansion, with its 29 rooms, will soon be a thing of the past. It seems a pity to destroy the portion—one of the most perfect specimens of the Greek portico in the country—but investigation has shown that the foundations are insecure, and the improvements are so extensive that the cost of the question. An elegant mansion will be erected on the old site during the coming months.

She—The day you had your pay raised. Town Topics.

Across the postcard is the larger part of the estate, and the plan is to leave nature undisturbed. Since Mr.

Vanderbilt has bought the place he has constructed through the plan of it a drive that adds much to the charm as well as to its accessibility. Little was necessary beyond blasting out such rocks as were in the road, cutting down a few trees, spanning the brooks, and following the natural windings of a forest path. It is an ideal drive, with outcroppings, overlooking forest trees, masses of ferns growing down the wagon tracks, and sweet wild flowers along its whole extent. As you wind along in the midst of the forest, and verdure, you may imagine yourself far away in the Adirondack forest, so sweet and still is the fragrant woodland. But presently a turn in the road brings you again to the highway; the scream of the whistle on the Hudson river road is in your ears, some gay coaching party whirls past, and you realize that the age of the fawn and the deer is past.

Mr. Vanderbilt is making many improvements in the place. A large force of men is at work clearing and grading, with careful instructions not to interfere with the natural beauty of the property. During the winter a beautiful pond was cleared out. About 30,000 worth of valuable muck was removed from the bottom, and the miniature lake, much improved, reflects the fresh summer green of the trees that bend over it, while a small fountain in fertilizer water disposal in an adjoining field. Verily, as the old rustic said: "Then as has, gets!"

In addition to these improvements there is extensive building in progress. Already a bachelor's lodge has been constructed, built on the site of the old carriage house of which the general outbuildings have been carefully followed. The broad driveway of the carriage house has been turned into the entrance hall of the lodge. This contains an immense fireplace, and is to be used as the general assembly-room, dining-room and lounge place. Its floor is calked like the deck of a ship but is nearly covered with a large and beautiful rug. One learns that upon the rug stands a dining-table, a writing-table and a completely equipped bar. Around the room are scattered every variety of comfortable couch and lounge-chair, making the hall the ideal of a bachelor's headquarters. Opening off this hall on the south are small rooms. Just the depth of the old stables. On the north the stables and the kitchen are in the kitchen. Besides these there are on this floor several bedrooms, with eight or ten shower-baths. The purpose of this building being to furnish free and easy accommodations for bachelor friends of Mr. Vanderbilt, the bathrooms are for their refreshment on coming in from golf or tennis, the kitchen is appointed for the convenience of game warden, and the main hall for smoking pipes and the stargazing and gossiping near the masculine board. There will no doubt be much sound of "revelry by the sea" in the snug little pavilion in time to come, but at present it is the object of quiet domesticity, since Mrs. Vanderbilt has taken up her residence there in the domestic condition of the world. Her rooms on the second floor, though small, are brightened by a variety of exquisite feminine trifles. Carpets in plain colors cover the floor, and the walls are beautifully decorated. A

Sanitary Plumbing.

Most Important Thing to be Considered by Home Builders.

[Copyright, 1906.]

In the general regret of the passing of artistry and fine handwork to make room for cheaper and more pretentious machine work, there is little of this feeling toward plumbing. It is true that the old journeymen were

will materially reduce the cost of the work. Avoid a useless multiplication of plumbing fixtures, and better fixtures in sleeping rooms. Plumbing fixtures, especially water closets, must always be located in well-lighted and well-ventilated apartments. In small cottages plan the bathroom as nearly as possible over the kitchen, in order to reduce the amount of piping. Numerous and elaborate plumbing appliances are useless and expensive. The above design is an example of economical and concentrated sanitary plumbing.

The pipes are all exposed so as to be easily accessible in case of leakage. The wash bowls are porcelain with marble slabs, back and sides, and are in the lavatory and bathroom; galvanized iron sink and drainboard, set on iron legs in the pantry, a copper boiler in the kitchen and two soapstone wash trays in the laundry in the cellar.

USE OF THE SENSES.

Habit and Experience Play a Part in Seeing and Hearing.

If we ask ourselves just how it is that we see, hear and receive impressions from the senses we shall soon discover two things. The first is that the explanation "we see with our eyes," "we hear with our ears," is not quite satisfactory. It is easy enough to explain how certain rays of light impinge on the retina of the eye and certain waves of air on the drum of the ear; but how these purely physical things are converted into the psychic things of sight and hearing no one can explain.

Our second discovery will be that it is not by the eye alone that we see, or by the ear alone that we hear. Memory, or rather, experience or habit, plays a great part in all sensations, though we do not often notice it. If, for example, a drawing is drawn to the fact by some circumstance that puts experience at fault, we produce a sensation which is not actually a copy of the object, but a copy of the object as we have seen it before.

Have you ever noticed, for instance, how experience helps you to recognize the position of sounds? If one made a noise at a little distance from you, you could instantly tell from what direction it came, because experience has taught you to judge of the matter through the very slight difference in the intensity of sound in your two ears. An experiment will readily prove this.

Stop up the left ear with a cotton wool and go into a dark room with some one else who carries a bell. Let the other person strike the bell in different parts of the room, yourself remaining still. No matter where the bell is, it will always seem to you to sound on your right side, even though it may actually be near the left ear. Person deaf in one ear can never tell whence a sound comes. It takes two ears to do this.

Some Curiosities of Seeing.

A correspondent of Nature inquires whether anybody has ever noticed that young children sometimes make drawings of objects upside down. He tells of two boys who, at an early stage in their artistic efforts, drew locomotives with the wheels up and the smokestack down, and one of these boys preferred in looking at a picture to hold it upside down. The correspondent thinks this may have some relation to the fact that images on the retina of the eye are reversed. He also relates the experience of a lady in India who often noted that natives, on taking up a photograph to look at it, replaced it upside down.

Patents in the United States.

A patent granted in the United States for an invention which has been previously patented in a foreign country will be so limited in time as to expire with the foreign patent. If there is more than one foreign patent, the right in the United States will expire with that foreign patent which has the shortest term. In no case, however, will a United States patent be continued in force for a greater period than 17 years.

Something New in Straws.

Artificial straws made of paper are beginning to take the place of the natural product for absorbing summer drinks. The paper in this imitation straw is rolled into shape and then covered with paraffine. While these straws are about the same price as the real straws, they seldom contain leaks and are therefore more satisfactory.

Very Odd.

"I don't know why it is, but I am always saddest on a Friday," said Miss Gwyneth.

"I don't understand how that can be," replied Mr. Skidds, "for the last day of the week is a Saturday."

Sanitary Plumbing.

Most Important Thing to be Considered by Home Builders.

[Copyright, 1906.]

In the general regret of the passing of artistry and fine handwork to make room for cheaper and more pretentious machine work, there is little of this feeling toward plumbing. It is true that the old journeymen were

will materially reduce the cost of the work. Avoid a useless multiplication of plumbing fixtures, and better fixtures in sleeping rooms. Plumbing fixtures, especially water closets, must always be located in well-lighted and well-ventilated apartments. In small cottages plan the bathroom as nearly as possible over the kitchen, in order to reduce the amount of piping. Numerous and elaborate plumbing appliances are useless and expensive. The above design is an example of economical and concentrated sanitary plumbing.

The pipes are all exposed so as to be easily accessible in case of leakage. The wash bowls are porcelain with marble slabs, back and sides, and are in the lavatory and bathroom; galvanized iron sink and drainboard, set on iron legs in the pantry, a copper boiler in the kitchen and two soapstone wash trays in the laundry in the cellar.

USE OF THE SENSES.

Habit and Experience Play a Part in Seeing and Hearing.

If we ask ourselves just how it is that we see, hear and receive impressions from the senses we shall soon discover two things. The first is that the explanation "we see with our eyes," "we hear with our ears," is not quite satisfactory. It is easy enough to explain how certain rays of light impinge on the retina of the eye and certain waves of air on the drum of the ear; but how these purely physical things are converted into the psychic things of sight and hearing no one can explain.

Our second discovery will be that it is not by the eye alone that we see, or by the ear alone that we hear. Memory, or rather, experience or habit, plays a great part in all sensations, though we do not often notice it. If, for example, a drawing is drawn to the fact by some circumstance that puts experience at fault, we produce a sensation which is not actually a copy of the object, but a copy of the object as we have seen it before.

Have you ever noticed, for instance, how experience helps you to recognize the position of sounds? If one made a noise at a little distance from you, you could instantly tell from what direction it came, because experience has taught you to judge of the matter through the very slight difference in the intensity of sound in your two ears. An experiment will readily prove this.

Stop up the left ear with a cotton wool and go into a dark room with some one else who carries a bell. Let the other person strike the bell in different parts of the room, yourself remaining still
